

RICHARD OLDFIELD WHITE	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	10	57	1

rd joined the Brisbane Newspaper Company as a cadet journalist in 1915. On turning seventeen, he enlisted in WW1 on 2 August 1916. After training after arriving in England on HMAT Marathon, he was hospitalised with mumps. After recovering, he was assigned to the 7/52nd Battalion and transferred to France where he saw service until March 1918 when he was sent back to England for treatment for trench foot. While there he was diagnosed with nephritis and invalided home to Australia. After his discharge from the AIF, he resumed his duties on the reporting staff of the Brisbane Courier until ill health forced him to enter Rosemount Repatriation Hospital where he died at the age of 27 on 22 October 1926.

WILLIAM HENRY WARMAN	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	2A	25	27/28

Warman was a compositor who worked on various newspapers and at the Queensland Government Printing Office. The name 'the father of Australian compositors' was bestowed on him by the Queensland Government Printer in 1909 on his birthday when he was still an employee of that Office. He had left the printing trade in 1864 to take up the licence for a hotel in Petrie Terrace which was named the Caxton, after the first English printer, William Caxton. He also gave his name to the street where it was located. He returned to his old trade in 1903 and died at his home in Petrie Terrace on 31 October 1912.

SYLVESTER DOIG	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	1	22	9

Doig was one of the early newspaper editors in Moreton Bay, Scottish-born Sylvester Doig came to the colony soon after it was opened to free settlers in 1842. In 1853-54 he edited the Moreton Bay Free Press and took an active part in public and community life in the early years of the colony. He also wrote a column for the Sydney Morning Herald in which he dismissed the call for separation of NSW as 'ridiculously premature'. He died on 25 September 1884 while in Leichhardt Street, Spring Hill. Unfortunately he destroyed most of his personal papers a couple of years before his death.

CHARLES MILLS	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	1	21	4

Mills was the printer of the very first issue of The Telegraph newspaper in Brisbane on 1 October 1872 and continued in that role for 22 years. He was born on 18 August 1834 in Longford, Ireland, the son of John Mills and Maria née Huggins. He arrived in Sydney as a teenager and, after serving his apprenticeship, he was employed on Sir Henry Parkes' Empire newspaper before moving to Brisbane in 1863 to take up a position as sub-overseer on the Queensland Daily Guardian until 1868. After a short period of employment

WILLIAM AUGUSTINE O'CARROLL	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	7	54	9

William was born c1831 in Cork, Ireland, the son of William O'Carroll, a sea captain. He brought his family to Brisbane in 1862 on the ship Chatsworth and was offered a job at the Queensland Daily Guardian after writing a series of letters to the editor of that newspaper. He rose to the position of editor of the Guardian before it was absorbed into the Courier in 1868. During his career he edited other newspapers including the Brisbane Courier and the Observer until his death on 16 May 1885 from complications from a cold.

JAMES CHARLES BEAL	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	7	41	18

James Beal was born in 1833 in Sydney where he served his apprenticeship at the Sydney Morning Herald. He came to Brisbane in 1862 to take up the position of Superintendent at the Government Printing Office where he was promoted to the position of Government Printer in 1867 and held that position until his retirement at the end of 1893. Outdoor exercise was recommended for printers for health reasons and James was involved in various sporting circles. He died on 24 August 1904 following a bout of influenza.

RICHARD BELFORD	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	15	11	6

For many years Richard was connected with the colonial press in NSW, Victoria and Qld. He was a native of Newtown, Limavady, in the county of Londonderry, Northern Ireland and came to NSW in 1838 with his parents, Richard (Snr) and Ann (née Linton). He was a partner in starting the Ballarat Star but after the partnership collapsed, moved to Brisbane and then to Ipswich where he took charge of the North Australian newspaper. Richard followed when that newspaper moved to Brisbane and died at the age of 42 from consumption on 28 April 1865. He was originally interred in the Roman Catholic burial ground at Milton but his remains and headstone were relocated to Toowong Cemetery in 1913.

SEPTIMUS PRICE	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	9	33	3

Septimus was born in Lambeth Surrey c1837. His occupation before immigrating to Queensland was clerk to a law stationer. In April 1862 he arrived in Moreton Bay on the Clifton and became a publishing assistant with the Queensland Daily Guardian. A short time after his arrival he married Louisa Kemp on 25 October 1862. After the closure of the Guardian, he joined the staff of the Government Printing Office as a publisher. Septimus died on 28 December 1902.

THOMAS DOWSE	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	13	58	22

September 1924 15-year-old Thomas was tried for theft at the Old Bailey sentenced to death, later commuted to transportation for life. Initially incarcerated on the prison hulks Bellerophon and Euryalus, he embarked on convict ship Florentia bringing him to Port Jackson arriving in January 1839. He served eight years before receiving a ticket of leave in 1836 and a conditional pardon in 1839. He came to Moreton Bay in 1842 when it was opened to free settlers and was the anonymous Brisbane correspondent to the Sydney Morning Herald. He was a prolific writer with columns in the Moreton Bay Courier, Brisbane Courier and The Queenslander written under pseudonym 'Old Tom'.

THOMAS WOODWARD HILL	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	13	42	22

Thomas Woodward Hill, born in Bedford, England on 31 December 1816 to Thomas Hill (printer) & Susanna (née Woodward), was already a compositor when he embarked for Australia aboard the Mary in 1839. He worked on newspapers in Melbourne and Nelson, New Zealand, before arriving in Queensland in December 1859. Thomas became father to three children when he married Agnes Caroline Rains in the Wharf Street Baptist Church, Brisbane on 29 November 1861.

Thomas became the official printer and publisher of The Brisbane Courier and The Queenslander. In 1884 Thomas was charged with libelling members of the Legislative Assembly. He won this landmark court case for freedom of the press. Ill health caused Thomas' retirement on his 74th birthday. He died in his Terrace home on 31 January 1892.

es

Queensland Index Search', The State of Queensland (Department of Justice and Attorney-General), 1995-2013

Digitised Newspapers and More (2016)

ry.com.

oncolonialqueensland.blogspot.com

db.anu.edu.au/biography/dowse-thomas-3440

convictrecords.com.au/convicts/dowse/thomas/89523

www.austlit.edu.au/austlit/page/9547711

A Friends of Toowong Cemetery Association Inc Guided Heritage Walk

MORE PRINT MEDIA IDENTITIES OF EARLY BRISBANE

Hoe Steam Powered Printing Press